Brainbox

Brainbox has been carefully developed to introduce young learners to the English language. The course provides useful and fun activities that help children to experience language learning as a motivating and cooperative venture.

Language is presented in contexts that reflect the children's own world through activities that foster their cognitive development, such as matching, mazes, singing, drawing and colouring.

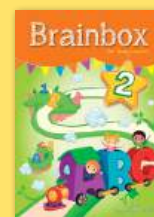

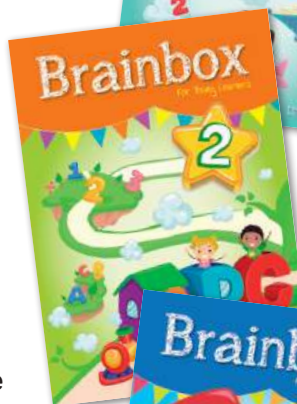

The course also includes activities to develop fine motor skills, such as, pencil control skills, spatial awareness, and hand-to-eye coordination.

There is a regular structure to every unit and each lesson follows a similar pattern. The structure of each unit gives the child a sense of security, while the repetition of activity types within the units reinforces learning and also helps to increase self-confidence and self-esteem.

When we write a story, we use the past simple for the main events, the past continuous to describe what was happening in the background, and the past perfect simple for something that happened before something else in the past. We also use the past simple and the past continuous together to show that one action interrupted another action in the past.

JUST 2 A MINUTE!

Don't forget to use sequencing words like first, next, after, then, suddenly and finally when you tell a story.

Some students are in favor of this idea, but others think it will not be worthwhile. Write an article for a local website about whether you believe such a course would be useful. Include at least one opinion of information given above to support your response.

Analyze the prompt

4. (almost a quarter / young people / say / have been bullied / 2012 survey)
5. (psychology professor / claim / young people / lack / may / struggle / adults)
6. (teenagers / without social skills / more problems / later in life / warn / psychology professor / Jean-Marie)

3. Read the prompt and underline the sentence that describes the situation.

4. What are the two opposing views on this topic? Circle the correct option.

- whether friends are more important than studies
- whether classes about how to make friends should be offered
- whether young people need to have more friendships to succeed in life

Build up your language skills

1. Using appropriate vocabulary in order to write an interesting article, choose the most appropriate vocabulary and word repetition. Replace the underlined words using the correct form of the words in the boxes.

1. Underline behavior and feelings might be lessened if students don't work hard.

2. Teenagers often don't have the necessary social skills to build lasting friendships.

3. If young people learn to work well with others, they will be more successful as adults.

4. Some skills do not come naturally; they must be gained through lessons.

5. Many children have a hard time with social interaction.

6. Replace these sentences using the words given.

- It's very important that young people develop the social skills to form genuine friendships. (essential / acquire / cultivate)
- Adolescence can be a tough time, especially for those who have difficulty getting along with kids their age. (challenging / collaborating / peers)
- One benefit of this course is that it will lessen antisocial behavior. (potential / mitigate)
- People who support this argument believe that many teens don't have enough experience to know how to be a true friend. (opponents / argument / lack)
- As a result, they suffer emotionally, so it's better if the educational system provides them with guidance. (struggle / preclude)

7. Collocations (adjectives and nouns) Match to form collocations. Then complete the sentences with the correct collocations.

1. rough	a. pressure
2. social	b. advantage
3. primary	c. connections
